Marist High School in trying to foster new ideas and re-evaluations of time-worn dogmas has engendered in its students a new totality that they have never experienced before.

This past year, the student body has been elevated to a new strata, in that its members now include a student from Sweden, Paolo Bartoletti. In and out of class, fellow students find Paolo to be outgoing and a scintillating conversationalist.

Hopefully, when he returns home, Paolo can carry The Spirit of Marist back with him. Assuredly, he has made an impression upon Marist and has given the students a better insight into the real world that surrounds them.

OLIVER

THE LARK

It has been written: the world of tomorrow belongs to the youth of today. And we stop there. Rather, would it not be well to write; the world of tomorrow belongs to the youth of today and that world will be what that youth is today?

To lay rock on terra firma is to put it on its foundation. It moves not and troubles not its neighbors for it is inanimate.

To lay a house on terra firma is to put it on its foundation. It moves not and troubles not its neighbors for it is inanimate.

To lay a person on terra firma is to put him on his foundation. He moves in many plains and troubles its neighbors for it is animate.

Traversing his many plains in directions dictated by self envisioned goals and extra-envisioned motives created by the collective will, gathered for the preservation of the collective people, he finds itself impinging trails. Conflict may and can result.

As the foundation for the rock is firm, so man can achieve equal staying power on a foundation strong enough to support him. So assured and positioned he can progress.

Such foundations are brighter than color, stronger than any conflict; for their design is perfection. It finds its strength in reality. Reality which is the product of man's strength in individual stature and depth of ubiquitous understanding, and marked by a pervasive search for a reality created of truth and the courage to ascend, in respectful dignity, above the individual, in its quest.

Democracy functions at the behest of its individual members and so being it will mirror them. The greatness of the individual is achieved in its direction toward the good of all, and being less so shall the image be less.

Ink-inscribed parchment, indented cut rock and vaulted ceiling rooms are not strength. Strength in a democracy, is in the minds and souls of the people who move in the pale of light cast by their beings. The reality is then, for each to find—for the eloquence of all.

To find reality we must look. As we look we must learn. As we learn so we will find.
Caution: sight is deceptive, colored and interpreted so learning is not always truth. For those for whom learning is reality let us learn to learn the Truth.

Reality is to a lonely some, lost in numerical and logarithmic bigness, whose ...

tangle and confusion belies the danger of accelerated indifference and the destructive forces inherent therein.

Loneliness is not a right given only to the old.
For often it is the broth given to youth.

But to others realities will always be a singular event.
For many, and maybe in the dreams of all, our own private world, our own private street.

If age is the incarcerator of physical freedom, let it then balance that reality with another; let it be the emancipator of accumulated knowledge—

a flood plain to be traversed in many directions for the heritage of the surrounding?

Frequently we hear: let us remove the shackles that bind and the halters that constrain us.

We are what we are and as evolution is slow to wrought change in the physical being so the evolution of social change is no less devoid of haste in its desire to evolve. No day will come when all at once the shackles will disappear and the halters fall away to leave us free to see the realities of other beings and other philosophies. They will have to wear from use until such time that they are cast aside along with other obsolescent trappings and vestiges of self concept and deception.

Nothing will bring this about more quickly than rubbing of halter to halter and shackle to shackle. Rubbing which takes place as we stand next to others. A friction, as were, generated of contact as we meet and experience the equally bound. And so in time we shall become free not through isolation but through experience.

The machine brought to its fullest by contact born of his failure to see his own truth and the truth of others, war, gives us now the greatest opportunity to have contact, to bring friction, to wear thin, to cast away.

Then this machine is surely irony; a product of strife—a builder of peace. But then that's consistent man and his pronouncements, and man and his acts—for is that irony also.

The important thing is not the answer tomorrow may bring but that I keep looking for it tomorrow.

Youth plays in childlike innocence troubled only by child problems, real to them though they may be.

While we build for them today their playground of tomorrow, canyon by canyon, without benefit of meaningful communication between the ages, let us pray that we be guided with foresighted wisdom.

Build not of stone or quarried rock
Of labor paid or bondage engaged,
Of pillared granite, old ivory, or wooden stock
Or other material types. Look enraged
Upon lives expended or treasure wasted
In frivolous pursuit of imagined gain
Which some insensitive man of lust tasted
In rakings and throwings of his myoptic brain.
The tower of Babel has to dust and traveled
As Dred Scott and Homers' words still lift
And away edifices are to judgement gaveled
But for reality created no mesh can sift.

For those things which stand when we are "the past"
Will be built on truths of which "ere they last."

Brother Michael Kieran, F.M.S.

Oh let me dream so broad and far,
Let me see horizons vast and wide;
Allow me the feel of the oceans inbound tide.

Let me know the gratification of success
Let me feel the pain and anguish of failure jest
And with this all give me but, occasional rest.

Onward let my footsteps go
Make compliance and stagnation not my quest.
But let me strive for fields anew: my seeds to test.

And with it all let me learn
Not indolence, distrust, distortion or hate;
But compassion, vision, horizons great.

Let me in the end but come to peace
And let people say of my path:
This place is better, it knew his laugh.

BROTHER PIUS XAVIER, F.M.S.
DIRECTOR-PRINCIPAL

Dear Graduates,

Now that you have completed your high school career, I feel quite certain that you realize that your tenure was during a time of confusion concerning our value system. We have experienced, and still are experiencing, a sort of internal and external war over the questions and value of the continued existence of Catholic schools.

The criticism of our Catholic schools has hit every phase of their operation: they create a ghetto mentality; they do not produce intellectuals; they turn out graduates who are so concerned with other worldly values that they are unable to compete economically; too much emphasis on religion; not enough emphasis on religion; too much in the way of athletics. Name it and our Catholic schools have been accused of it.

It is not my purpose here to refute these charges. This has already been taken care of by many eminent scholars. My intention in calling to mind the present controversy is to impress upon you the responsibility which is yours as graduates of Marist, a vital cell in our Catholic educational system.

Evidence is plentiful to support the thesis that Catholic schools have been a significant, and possibly the most significant element in the Catholic Church. Your heritage as graduates of a Catholic high school is a great one. I am confident that your lives will bear fitting testimony to our Catholic education system.

May the blessing of Almighty God and His Blessed Mother be with you always.

Sincerely in J.M.J.,

Bro. Pius Xavier

We the staff of the Marist "Plainsman" wish to express our thanks and debt of gratitude to:

Mr. A. Richard Pachter, who produced and permitted use of photographs and copy on pages 176 through 191.

And to the administration and Faculty, without whose cooperation this book could not have been realized, we owe a special debt of Thanks.

The moderator of the "Plainsman" would at this point wish to express his sincere thanks to the staff of this journal for their unrelenting drive and coherent contributions.
